Religion at Exmouth Community College is regarded as an integral part of the school curriculum, essential to any child's complete and thorough education.

Religion may be seen as a particular and distinctive way of interpreting experience and mode of understanding and to study religion is the entitlement of each child.

Aims

Religious Education at Exmouth Community College seeks to implement the aims and objectives of the Education Reform Act 1988 and specifically those of the New Agreed Syllabus for Religion in Devon (new one in place from September 2015).

Therefore within Exmouth Community College Religion aims:

- to promote the spiritual, moral, cultural and mental development of students and society.
- to offer explicit opportunities for students to consider the response of religion to fundamental questions about the purpose of being, morality and ethical standards and develop their own response to such matters.
- to ensure students gain both a thorough knowledge of Christianity reflecting the Christian heritage of this country and knowledge of other principle religions represented in Great Britain.
- to help to promote among students a clear set of personal values and beliefs.
- to promote respect for, and understanding of, those with different beliefs and religious practices from their own, based on rigorous study of different faiths.
- to explore difficult issues within a supportive framework

Religion at Exmouth Community College seeks to achieve these aims by assisting students to:

- reflect on those aspects of human experience which give rise to fundamental questions about life.
- develop a sensitivity to spiritual/religious interpretations of human experience.
- study Christianity and the principal religions represented in Britain.
- it involves a wide range of concepts, skills, attitudes and emotions.
- it encourages the individual to gain self-understanding, to explore relationships with others and to consider the place of the individual within the local community and the wider world.

The College acknowledges the legal provisions:

- that parents have the right to withdraw their children.
- that Religious Education should be non-denominational.
